

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to the nucleic acid and polypeptide sequences of a novel human RPS6KA6-related gene variant (RPS6KA6V).

5 The invention also provides a process for producing the polypeptide of the variant.

The invention further provides a use of the nucleic acid and polypeptide sequences of the gene variant in diagnosing T-cell lymphoblastic lymphoma.